Cholera and yellow fever were later considerations. The first reported prevalence of yellow fever was at Bridgetown, Barbados, in 1647, the year before the great pest of Habana. At this time quarantine measures had been practiced against other malignant contagious diseases, a maritime quarantine station having been in operation at Venice in 1403, nearly a century before the discovery of America. It was only necessary to include yellow fever in the category of contagious exotic diseases and apply against the malady the procedures already in vogue. The first appearance of yellow fever in Europe occurred at Lisbon in 1723, and is described in the article Yellow fever in Portugal (Bulletin No.4, Yellow Fever Institute, United States Public Health and Marine Hospital Service). It was not, however, until 1821, following an extensive epidemic in Spain, that quarantine was applied in Europe against yellow fever. The Spanish academies were interpellated as to the nature of the disease, and as a result of their replies yellow fever was declared quarantinable. Inquiry in England in 1823 and 1824 was followed by an act of Parliament directing quarantine against yellow fever in the same way as against plague. Quarantine theory and practice have from the beginning followed medical dogma. Religion, astrology, and crude or false doctrines of etiology extended their influence. Like most branches of practical medicine, the practice of quarantine passed from the hands of priests into those of empiricists. It took ages for public sanitation to establish...
