W. W. Norton & Company. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 304 pages. Dimensions: 8.0in. x 5.4in. x 0.8in. Aciman's best so far. . . . An existentialist adventure worthy of Kerouac. Clancy Martin, New York Times Book Review Andr Aciman has been hailed as the most exciting new fiction writer of the twenty-first century (New York magazine), a brilliant chronicler of the disconnect between who we are and who we wish we might have been (Wall Street Journal), and a writer of fiction at its most supremely interesting (Colm Tibn). Now, with his third and most ambitious novel, Aciman delivers an elegant and powerful tale of the wages of assimilation a moving story of an immigrants remembered youth and the nearly forgotten costs and sacrifices of becoming an American. Its the fall of 1977, and amid the lovely, leafy streets of Cambridge a young Harvard graduate student, a Jew from Egypt, longs more than anything to become an assimilated American and a professor of literature. He spends his days in a pleasant blur of seventeenth-century fiction, but when he meets a brash, charismatic Arab cab driver in a Harvard Square caf, everything changes. Nicknamed Kalashnikov Kalaj for short for his machine-gun vitriol, the cab driver roars into the students life with his denunciations of the American obsession with all things jumbo and ersatz Twinkies, monster television sets, all-you-can-eat buffets and his outrageous declarations on love and the art of seduction. The student finds it hard to resist his new friends magnetism, and before long he begins to neglect his studies and live a double life: one in the rarified world of Harvard, the other as an exile with Kalaj on the streets of Cambridge. Together they carouse the bars and cafs around Harvard Square, trade intimate accounts of their love affairs, argue about the American dream, and...
